

PRICE ONE CENT.

FOR THE BENEFIT of the great number of unemployed, and in the line of Public Service, THE WORLD will accept all SITUATIONS WANTED Advertisements, not exceeding 20 words, for 10 CENTS, each for insertion in the Daily or Sunday World.

PRICE ONE CENT.

LAST EDITION

MORGAN STILL MAD.

He Uses the Senate's Time to Denounce Mr. Hill.

Dolph Motion to Correct the Journal Finally Tabled.

Then Mr. Teller Takes Up a Fresh Line of Obstruction.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The Senate met at 10 this morning, the ordinary time of meeting having been advanced an hour by the parliamentary device adopted last evening in taking a recess instead of adjourning.

A quarter of an hour, however, was spent in waiting for the arrival of the forty-third Senator in order to constitute a quorum. There was no prayer and no reading of yesterday's Journal—the Journal of Monday not being yet approved, and the pending question being on Mr. Dolph's motion to amend it by making it show the presence of Senators Allen and Kyle on a roll call, they being in the chamber and not answering.

Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.) reopened the argument of the question.

MORGAN IS IMAGINATIVE.
He imagined a case in which two Senators voted yes upon a bill and one Senator voted no; while the rest of the Senators remained in their seats, silent, and he asked whether that bill could be said to have passed the Senate.

"Those who have sat by and not voted might have meant to say, by their silent negative votes, that they were unwilling to do business of that sort, they might have said, 'It is true that they are here, it is true that we do not vote for them, but our presence and silence indicate that we are not voting for the purpose of doing the business that you are going to do.' We have a right to be here to see what kind of a bill you are going to make."

Mr. Morgan then took up the decision of the Supreme Court, which was referred to yesterday as being in favor of the right of the presiding officer to count a quorum. He said that the decision could not be twisted into a support of that doctrine "except by the artfulness of an attorney of the kind of which you are going to make."

The Supreme Court, Mr. Morgan said, had never claimed the power to decide on the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the rule of either house. It could not do that. That was a political question in which the Supreme Court never could be involved.

SUPREME COURT NOT SPARED.
Then Mr. Morgan applied his argument to Mr. Hill, who had referred to those men who have easy consciences who follow the Supreme Court. There are men in the Senate who have easy consciences so very easy that they can bend them to any purpose which their political necessities require. They are men who are so very easy that they can bend them to any purpose which their political necessities require.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

He was corrected on that point by Mr. Hill (Rep., Mass.), who said that in the case, and asserted that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress, and that the increase of the court had been provided for by Congress.

GILROY IS A GRANDFATHER.

The Mayor's Daughter, Mrs. Mulqueen, Adds to His Honors.

It is a Girl, and It Weighed Ten Pounds at Birth.

CLEVELAND STAYS AT HIS POST.

Will Not Leave Washington Till Affairs Are in Better Shape.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The President authorizes the announcement that he will not go to Trenton to-morrow, nor will he leave Washington for any purpose until the important public questions which Congress was called in extra session to adjust are in better shape than at present.

POWELL'S WORK IN THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—No bill of importance was reported from the Committee to-day and the House proceeded to the transaction of routine business.

WAS BURNING IN ITS SHROUD.

Little Ethel Sherman's Body Rescued by Her Father.

A Pathetic Story Brought Out by a Special Police Report.

A special report was made by Police Capt. Dyer, of the Atlantic Avenue station, to-day, relative to a fire which occurred last Friday in the home of William Sherman, at 123 Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

Sherman, it appears, was formerly a Roman Catholic priest at the Church of the Visitation, in Verona street, South Brooklyn. About six years ago he fell in love with Annie McCoy, who lived in Henry street and was a pupil in Public School No. 12. He gave up his church and married her.

On Monday week ago his four-year-old daughter Ethel was taken ill. She died on Thursday last.

The little body was laid out in a shroud and candles were placed at her head.

Following morning Mr. Sherman discovered smoke coming from the front of the house. He rushed into the front room and found the body of his child surrounded by flames.

The curtains had caught fire from the candles, and the shroud was ablaze.

Mr. Sherman snatched the body from the flames and carried it to the front porch.

Meanwhile Police Officer Hancock, Cryan, Flaherty and Whitford entered the house and kept down the burning curtains.

Capt. Dyer, in his report, says that the dead child's right arm and hand were found in the fire.

He said that the parents concealed this fact at the time.

MYERS TO BE NAMED.

A Citizens' Mass Meeting to Be Held Friday Night.

Comptroller Myers, when asked this morning what he thought of the Tammany ticket, replied: "I suppose it is a good ticket. I do not care to discuss it."

The Comptroller said he would urge his friends not to waste their time and money in promoting the ticket, but to concentrate on the city government.

It was his opinion that, under existing conditions, the Tammany ticket would win.

He regarded himself as a public servant, and he would not be nominated at the citizens' mass-meeting to be held in the city hall to-morrow.

He also stated that he would not be nominated at the citizens' mass-meeting to be held in the city hall to-morrow.

He also stated that he would not be nominated at the citizens' mass-meeting to be held in the city hall to-morrow.

MRS. GIBERT'S CASE.

Extracts from Her Letters Read in Her Divorce Trial To-Day.

Although Plaintiff in Her Suit, She Is on the Defensive.

Two Men Come from Paris to Save Her Reputation.

Mrs. Annie T. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

She wore a strikingly conspicuous orange-colored hat that was in pleasing harmony with her blonde hair, a blue serge skirt, a brown and gray polka-dot blouse, all enveloped in a long blue cloak to match the skirt.

Mrs. Gibert, as bright-eyed and chipper as though winning men's hearts at a seaside resort instead of hearing an impassioned and sensational divorce suit, took the witness stand in Common Pleas Court to-day and calmly waited for the resumption of the war of words between herself and Lawyer Parsons, the cross-examining attorney.

AFTER THE RACING IS OVER.

The Track Owner—The Bookmaker—The Horse Owner—The Talent.

family cropped out again when the witness was asked if her sister was not married to a brother of Audin Gibert.

"Unfortunately, that is true," said Mrs. Gibert.

She then admitted she had not had anything to do with her sister since 1888.

"Do you remember an interview with Mr. Gibert in 1888?" she was asked.

"Yes, distinctly," said the witness with emphasis. "He insulted me very grossly."

"Stop, stop," interrupted Lawyer Townsend, the plaintiff's attorney.

"Did you ever tell Santa Maria that your husband objected to your friendship with Santa Maria?" asked Mr. Parsons.

"Why, not at all," answered Mrs. Gibert.

Continuing under examination, she mentioned different places where she had met Santa Maria in Paris. She also said Santa Maria had a place of residence in Paris.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

Although the suit which Mrs. Gibert is now having tried before Judge Bischoff had primarily no more sensational feature than that her husband had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

She waited impatiently for the fray that every one felt sure was coming, tapped the floor nervously with her foot, and every now and then looked defiantly at the defendant, Audin Gibert, man of town, heir to a fortune, and self-proclaimed artist, who had brought a counter suit to the one on trial, alleging that his wife had been intimate with a wealthy South American known as Santa Maria.

The Track Owner—The Bookmaker—The Horse Owner—The Talent.

ACTRESSES IN THE "JUG."

Cassie Fawcett and Ethel Lawrence Prisoners.

Discharged with a Warning Against Raising a Disturbance.

Cassie Fawcett, a pretty actress, who played the leading role in "The Dark Side of a Great City" last season, and a companion, who said her name was Ethel Lawrence, also an actress, were arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court to-day. They were arrested last night for creating a disturbance on the sidewalk in front of a restaurant at Broadway and Thirtieth street, and were locked up in the West Thirtieth street police station all night.

Too much wine and oysters and lobster, and obstreperous tempers were what got the spotlight favorites into the trap.

They had been dining and whining with two middle-aged men, one of whom is said to be Samuel M. Daniels, thirty-seven years old, a native of New York, and the other a Frenchman named H. B. Boudin.

It is known that Daniels is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that he is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that he is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate.

Some kind of an altercation began when the two actresses came to the door of the restaurant, and the two men, who were sitting at the table, got up and went to the door.

Miss Fawcett pushed him away, and her female companions began to shout and yell.

The captain called out two officers and told them to arrest the women and their companions. The officers went to the door and arrested the women and their companions.

They were placed just behind Mary Kelly, a station-house keeper, and were confined in the same cell.

Miss Fawcett's companion is said to be a member of the "Jug" family. She is about twenty-four years old, a blonde and pretty, and she played a minor part in "The World of the Jug."

It is known that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate.

She was placed just behind Mary Kelly, a station-house keeper, and was confined in the same cell.

Miss Fawcett's companion is said to be a member of the "Jug" family. She is about twenty-four years old, a blonde and pretty, and she played a minor part in "The World of the Jug."

It is known that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate.

She was placed just behind Mary Kelly, a station-house keeper, and was confined in the same cell.

Miss Fawcett's companion is said to be a member of the "Jug" family. She is about twenty-four years old, a blonde and pretty, and she played a minor part in "The World of the Jug."

EXIT ANARCHY'S EX-QUEEN.

Emma Goldman Goes to Blackwell's Island for a Year.

Paced the Tombs Corridor Like a Caged Wild Cat.

Emma Goldman prepared herself this morning for her journey from the Tombs to Blackwell's Island. She wrapped up her few belongings in a newspaper, and passed most of the forenoon pacing up and down the women's corridor like a caged wild cat.

Her only visitor this morning at the Tombs was her friend Morris Stein, who remained with her until 12:30 P. M., when a keeper came in and announced that the prison van was ready to start.

Emma put on her black hat, and covering her face with a thick veil, followed the keeper to the prison van, after bidding good-by to her friend Stein.

She was dressed in her blue serge suit. There were fourteen men to go up in the van to be transferred to the penitentiary, so Emma was not compelled to travel alone.

Deputy Sheriff Dalrymple, who had charge of the "little fibbers," assisted her to get into the van, and then took his place at the front of the van and then took his place at the front of the van.

As the boat which was to convey her to the island did not start until 1 o'clock, Emma was taken to one of the big cells located on the pier, and locked up until the boat was ready to go. She made no noise.

Contrary to expectation none of her friends was on hand to see her off, and she was left alone in the prison van.

She was placed just behind Mary Kelly, a station-house keeper, and was confined in the same cell.

Miss Fawcett's companion is said to be a member of the "Jug" family. She is about twenty-four years old, a blonde and pretty, and she played a minor part in "The World of the Jug."

It is known that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate.

She was placed just behind Mary Kelly, a station-house keeper, and was confined in the same cell.

Miss Fawcett's companion is said to be a member of the "Jug" family. She is about twenty-four years old, a blonde and pretty, and she played a minor part in "The World of the Jug."

It is known that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate, and that she is a close friend of the late head of the "Jug" syndicate.

She was placed just behind Mary Kelly, a station-house keeper, and was confined in the same cell.

Miss Fawcett's companion is said to be a member of the "Jug" family. She is about twenty-four years old, a blonde and pretty, and she played a minor part in "The World of the Jug."

IS YELLOW JACK AT BOSTON.

British Steamer in Quarantine with Thirteen Men Sick.

BOSTON, Oct. 18.—The British steamer Mexicana, Capt. Ewert, from Progreso, Mexico, which arrived at Quarantine at 4:30 P. M. yesterday, remains at Quarantine, with thirteen of her crew stricken down. It is supposed with yellow fever.

Two of the crew died of the disease on the 11th inst., and were shortly afterwards buried at sea.

Dr. Lane, the port physician, states that while the disease has every appearance of being yellow fever, there is a possibility of its being only malarial.

Two of the crew who are very ill have been removed to Galapagos Island, and the others will be taken there this afternoon.

The steamer will certainly not be allowed to come up to the city until all signs of the disease are stamped out.

Quarantine Commissioners Meet.

The Board of Quarantine Commissioners met this morning to consider the case of the Mexicana, and to decide upon the measures to be taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Board of Quarantine Commissioners met this morning to consider the case of the Mexicana, and to decide upon the measures to be taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Board of Quarantine Commissioners met this morning to consider the case of the Mexicana, and to decide upon the measures to be taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Board of Quarantine Commissioners met this morning to consider the case of the Mexicana, and to decide upon the measures to be taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Board of Quarantine Commissioners met this morning to consider the case of the Mexicana, and to decide upon the measures to be taken to prevent